Synopsis:

When a company goes into liquidation, control of the company's affairs fall in the hands of an appointed private liquidator or the Official Receiver. A private liquidator is often appointed to realise and distribute the assets of a company in liquidation.

This talk is intended to give an insight into the appointment of private liquidators, the process once the company is liquidated, how they are remunerated and what their duties are in relation to creditors and directors of an insolvent company.

Join Lavinia and Mavin in this interactive session where they will share their views on some of the common issues and reported judgments concerning Liquidators and related issues.
