Synopsis:

As we know, the practice of Law is changing and society has undergone a Technological Revolution for the last 20 years which transformed whole industries and clients' expectations. In some ways, the global pandemic of 2020/21 accelerated this when lawyers were made to work from home for 18 months while relying on Information Technology (IT) and Cloud storage to continue providing legal services.

Topics:

- Why the Law is changing
- Ways in which we can provide Legal Services through faster, cheaper and ultimately more efficient ways

The Speaker:

Patrick Grant is a Tutor and Project Director for Legal Tech and Innovation at ULaw's Leeds Campus. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Law and a Master of Arts in Law and Economics from the University of Bologna and University of Gent. He completed the Legal Practice Course (LPC) at the Oxford Institute of Legal Practice.

He has worked as a Duty Solicitor at Police Stations / Magistrate's Courts and developed a Military Law practice in assisting those charged with criminal offences. He also teaches Criminal Law, Public Law, Intellectual Property and the Common Law Method.
